

PARENT TALK : ‘What our children say they desperately need but will never tell you’

Monica Rowe is a Communications Facilitator and Managing Director of Key Conversations. She works with 25,000 + tweens and teens every year, and so has a unique insight into what our young teenagers are experiencing as they go through their school years.

Monica will be working with students in the school on Wednesday 28th February and you may be surprised at what many say they would like to change in their lives, but are struggling to do so.

Many say they need your help, but will never ask for it.

While some of what Monica has to say may be surprising, she will share some communication tips and skills that will really help you to be successful with any conversations you have with your children going forward.
